Oxygen Education & Thomas P. Miller and Associates Partner to Advance Workforce and Economic Development

Partnership teams TPMA's strategic workforce development expertise with Oxygen Education's high quality, online content for workforce education.

Indianapolis, Ind. – November 17, 2009 – Oxygen Education, LLC, a market leading developer of digital content for technical education and workforce development, and Thomas P. Miller and Associates (TPMA), an Indiana-based economic development and workforce strategies consulting firm, have joined forces to provide complete solutions for workforce and economic development. The partnership pairs TPMA's twenty years of experience providing strategic guidance to community, education, business, and government leaders to promote economic growth with Oxygen Education's interactive online content for workforce training. Together the companies offer both the strategic vision and the high tech tools to enable communities and business nationwide to leverage and support sustainable economic growth.

"Oxygen Education's simulation-based online learning content makes high quality workforce training accessible anytime, anyplace," said Tom Miller, president and CEO, Thomas P. Miller and Associates. "TPMA is pleased that this partnership will enable us to provide Oxygen's online training as a key component in strategic plans we develop to promote public- and private-sector workforce and economic development."

"TPMA has a long history of success helping communities and businesses capitalize on their strengths to support economic development," said Mike Fitzgerald, president, Oxygen Education. "We're excited that the Oxygen Education partnership with TPMA will expand the reach of our online content for workforce education and play an important role in educating and retraining America's workforce."

Thomas P. Miller and Associates enhances the economic value of educational institutions, companies, and communities by aligning people, technology, and initiatives. TPMA helps clients identify and capitalize on potential community-building opportunities that both leverage and support sustainable economic growth. From identifying current workforce skills and industry clusters to finding ways to leverage training and community appeal to attract new business, Thomas P. Miller and Associates works to keep local workforces working.
